Who are we?

Why join us?

Our small, dedicated team, based at our head office at Cranfield University are happy to chat, support, or put you in touch with members that can give you advice about your career or answer technical or business focussed questions.

You will have access to a wide range of resources, regional technical meetings, seminars and conferences. Our members are national and international experts in the industry from many fields who can help solve any technical or career based challenges.

We regularly update you about research, technical developments and applications with news of IAGrE activities, members, companies and job opportunities through our membership journal Landwards, our learned journal Biosystems Engineering, electronic eNews and social media channels.

We offer a mentoring service for people needing career development advice. This includes help with matters relating to the professional registration process.

We are always striving to make sure we evolve and adapt, to ensure our services keep pace and remain relevant to you.

How to join?

By choosing to join us we will be your 'Passport to Professionalism'.

At IAGrE it's all about supporting your professional life and enhancing your opportunities through:

- Networking
- Standing
- Knowledge

Anyone can join us and the journey starts with Affiliate membership. The first easy step is to complete the online application that is on our web site <http://iagre.org/membershipintro>. Once complete we will review your application and let you know which grade is right for you.

Our membership grades are:

Student

This grade is free and is for students following relevant vocational and university courses in scientific, engineering, landbased technology or other relevant technical subjects in the UK and Ireland. This free membership grade lasts until a year after your graduation, supporting you into your first job.

Affiliate – AIAGrE

For members actively involved or interested in agriculture, engineering or associated landbased technology and who do not necessarily have relevant formal qualifications.

Technician – TIAGrE

For members qualified at vocational level, who have completed an apprenticeship, diploma or similar in agriculture, engineering or associated landbased technology. You could be working in the industry and have early experience and skills developed through your work to date.

Associate Member – AMIAGrE

This is a corporate grade for people who have agricultural, engineering or other relevant technical qualifications in subjects recognised and accepted by IAGrE. You will probably have relevant industry training and experience as well.

Member – MIAGrE

This corporate grade is for those who are well established in their career and have a lengthy record of on-going training and experience.

Fellow – FIAGrE

The highest grade of membership for those with long and established careers in the industry, experts in their field who uphold the highest standards of professionalism.

How much will it cost me?

Student Membership is FREE, sponsored by the Douglas Bomford Trust.

Membership starts from as little as £40 per year but for those who achieve the highest grade of membership and choose to have Chartered Registration fees may be up to £250 per annum.

Direct Debit Payments

It's cheaper to pay by direct debit - you save £5 each year. You can choose to make a one off payment or spread the cost over 10 months.
